1.R.00.2.4 x 3.69.e.Association of alcohol intake and drinking pattern with survival of patients with breast cancer. This study aimed to determine the association between alcohol intake or drinking pattern and survival of patients with breast cancer. This study included 605 patients with breast cancer who were treated at the medical oncology unit of the university hospitals between January 2009 and June 2014. The means \pm SD of the age, alcohol intake, and weight were 51.3 ± 14.4 years, 197.1 ± 167.9 g/day, and 50.9 ± 10.5 kg, respectively. Alcohol intake was calculated by multiplying the amount of alcohol consumed in 1 week by the number of weeks in 1 year. The patients were divided into the nondrinking group (0 g/week) and the drinking group (1-400 g/week). After a median follow-up period of 37 months (range, 0-83 months), the 5-year overall survival (OS) and relapse-free survival (RFS) were 79.5% and 90.1%, respectively. For RFS, there was no significant difference between the drinking and nondrinking groups ($p = 0.052$). However, 5-year OS was significantly higher in the drinking group than in the nondrinking group ($p = 0.004$). In the univariate and multivariate analyses, alcohol intake greater than 400 g/week was an independent prognostic factor for OS (hazard ratio [HR]: 1.52; 95% confidence interval [CI]: 1.06-2.18, $p = 0.024$), and drinking in the past year was an independent prognostic factor for OS (HR: 1.53; 95% CI: 1.08-2.17, $p = 0.017$). The effect of alcohol intake on OS was statistically significant in univariate analysis, but it was not statistically significant in multivariate analysis. This study suggests that alcohol intake
